Creeper unveil new single 'Black Heaven'

NEW SINGLE - BLACK HEAVEN

Creeper have released their new single 'Black Heaven'. The track is the third single from their vampiric new album Sanguivore, due for release on Friday 13th October via Spinefarm.

Presenting an important moment in the story between the album's core characters, Spook and Mercy, the vocal interplay between vocalist William Von Ghould's baritone croon and keyboardist/vocalist Hannah Hermione's sweetly alluring vocal harmonies provides another standout touch, which was inspired by Nick Cave's collaboration with the McGarrigle Sisters on the Bad Seeds' track 'Hallelujah'.

William Von Ghould says: "This song allows us to show a new side to the band and sees us experimenting with electronic elements properly for the first time. Taking influence from Depeche Mode and New Order, we try to push the boundaries of our sound out further than they've been before."

SANGUIVORE

Produced by Tom Dalgety (Ghost, Royal Blood), new album Sanguivore finds Creeper going larger-than-life in every conceivable way, from Jim Steinman-style ripping rock operas to Billy Idol's punk/sleaze hybrid, and the moody heavyweight electro-rock of Gary Numan. In a world that's getting darker by the moment, the vampiric thrills of Sanguivore offers fans a fantastical escape into the unknown, and one that's full of Easter eggs for those fans who thoroughly immerse themselves within every detail of the record.

ORDER NOW

After a surprise second stage headline set at Download and then playing the OVO Arena Wembley as part of the Heavy Music Awards, Creeper recently announced a London Lafayette show under their alter ego The Ghost Brigade, which sold out instantly. The band have also announced a second matinee show at Lafayette, which will have a different setlist to the evening show.

Creeper will then embark upon the Sacred Blasphemy headline tour in November, which concludes with a much larger London show at the O2 Shepherd's Bush Empire, which is also about to sell out.

Bruce Dickinson announces new solo album!

BRUCE DICKINSON

Renowned around the world as one of the greatest and most distinctive heavy metal vocalists of all time, Bruce Dickinson will be releasing a brand new solo album in early 2024 on BMG Records.

Entitled 'The Mandrake Project' it sees him reunited with long-time musical collaborator and producer Roy Z.

'The Mandrake Project' will be Dickinson's seventh solo album and his first since 'Tyranny Of Souls' in 2005.

Dickinson explains, "This album has been a very personal journey for me and I am extremely proud of it. Roy Z and I have been planning, writing and recording it for years, and I am very excited for people to finally hear it. I'm even more excited at the prospect of getting out on the road with this amazing band that we have put together, to be able to bring it to life. We're planning to play as many shows as we can in as many places as possible, for as many people as we can!"

"As for what The Mandrake Project actually is... all will be revealed soon!"

BLINK 182

Blink 182 delighted fans this week with news that their new album, 'One More Time...' will be released on October 20th!

That was all though as the band also debuted a new single of the same name.

The news comes just ahead of the trio hitting stages across the UK.

THE DOLLYROTS

The Dollyrots are set to release their new album 'Night Owls' on October 13 and this week shared new single 'When We're Sober'.

"As a band who writes songs about knowing how to party, we can honestly say we're pretty good at it. But we also know testing limits means maybe you're not so sure about your own. 'When We're Sober' isn't an anti-drinking song, and it's not a pro-drinking song. It's more about acknowledging how easy it is to lose control of something when you aren't aware of your own tendencies." -- says singer / bassist Kelly Ogden

Metal for Good announce 'Metal Merch Day'!

METAL MERCH DAY 2023

Metal For Good - A charity looking to harness the power of rock and metal for an equal society - has announced its first annual fundraising campaign - Metal Merch Day, to be held in October this year.

Metal For Good, which was awarded charitable status at the end of 2022, aims to invite rockers and metalheads across the country to don their favourite rock and metal merch in support of their work on the 20th October.

As well as wearing their merch to work/college/the gym (or whatever they happen to be doing on the day!) for a small charitable donation, rockers and metalheads will be encouraged to organise their own community fundraising events in the weeks before and after, including gig nights, rock and metal themed pub quizzes, or challenge events including rock and metal/fancy dress themed group runs or football matches.

Metal For Good believe that the rock and metal community are a force for change, and in the transformational power of music. All money raised goes directly to community projects helping people through music.

Metal For Good co-founder Katy Baker said: "We're delighted to be launching our first #metalmerchday campaign, we know that the rock and metal community are some of the loveliest people around, and take huge comfort and benefit from music being such a huge part of their lives. We can't wait to see social media flooded with pictures of people in their favourite merch, and raise much needed money for grassroots projects using music to change lives".

CHELSEA WOLFE

Chelsea Wolfe has announced her signing to Loma Vista Recordings and presented her new single, 'Dusk.'

Of the song, Wolfe comments, "The friends or lovers have gone through hell and back but are still and always united in the end by love, like pottery gone through the fire, broken and pieced back together."

'Dusk' marks Wolfe's first new music for her new label home, and her first original music following her contributions to the score of 2022 A24 film X.

ALIEN WEAPONRY

Alien Weaponry continue to share their history with the release of an artistic new music video for Tangaroa album track 'Īhenga'.

The band comment on the video: "When the Te Arawa people first came to Aotearoa (New Zealand) from Hawaiki (greater Tahitian Island group), they set about exploring the new land. Īhenga traveled throughout the North Island of Aotearoa and named many places that still have these names today."

VEXED

After releasing their second album, 'Negative Energy', earlier this year, VEXED have graced their fans with a new visual highlight, 'Lay Down Your Flowers' featuring Alpha Wolf vocalist Lochie Keogh.

Vocalist Megan Targett says "'The boy who cried wolf' is a story that we are all familiar with. 'Lay down your flowers' is based on the vindication of the people who have had to endure living their lives in constant fear and threat of tragedy. Finding the courage to stand up to those who use your emotions and good nature to take advantage, and claiming back your sanity which was so manipulatively taken from you."

THE CADILLAC THREE

The Cadillac Three have released their latest single 'Double Wide Grave' from their upcoming album.

"It's a heavy love song," Johnston explains. "'Double Wide Grave' is another song I wrote about me and my wife, but it happened to be written when we were also dealing with the loss of Taylor Hawkins from Foo Fighters. I made that track a day or two after he passed. At the time, I was producing the Foo Fighters' guitarist Chris Shiflett's album, so I got to witness the pain the band was going through. I did everything in the song like they would've done it, just with a southern TC3 spin added in, and it worked."

P.O.D.

P.O.D. have shared their new single 'DROP'.

"We're still here and we're still creating some of the best music we've ever made," says guitarist Marcos Curiel. "When it comes to heart, grit and soul, P.O.D. is your band." Adds vocalist Sonny Sandoval: "We're always still proving who we are — always having that punk-rock mentality."

"'DROP' is another one of a kind, unparalleled banger that sets this band apart from everyone else," says Sandoval. "When you hear it, you know it's P.O.D.!"

CASEY

Casey have revealed their huge new single 'Puncture Wounds to Heaven'.

Vocalist Tom Weaver comments: "'Puncture Wounds to Heaven' centres around the themes of apathy and the guilt that can arise as a result. The "coming up for air" sensation as you briefly snap out of a depressive episode, and survey how life has progressed around you. This is a core theme that carries throughout the new record, and musically the dichotomy between the smooth verses and the chaotic middle 8 really demonstrated that in a visceral way for us."

JACK VALERO

After featuring on our 'Discover' New Music Playlist, Jack Valero has shared his debut EP 'This Is A Nightmare', alongside a video for its title track and new single.

Jack says, "This song is about confronting the truth of a dying relationship in a somewhat sarcastic and humorous way. I'm big on characters in songs and this character is trying to make the other character admit that their time is over, but facing it in a more positive way than the traditional sad break-up song. Instead it reflects on the euphoric freedom that sometimes comes with brutal honesty."

LITTLE MAN TATE

Sheffield indie-rockers Little Man Tate have shared details of their first studio album in over a decade, 'Welcome To The Rest Of Your Life' which is out November 17th.

Frontman Jon Windle explains: "We became known for writing observational songs with interesting characters in them, often based on people we knew or had met. When we sat down and started writing again we didn't want to move away from that, but we are 15 years down the line now so reference points change. We've been through marriages, loss, having kids, some of us getting divorced, and I think that comes across in the music. It's still Little Man Tate... it's just Little Man Tate a bit more grown up!"

THE SLEEPING SOULS

THE SLEEPING SOULS – have announced their debut album 'Just Before The World Starts Burning', out 24th November via Xtra Mile Recordings, and shared third single "Rivals".

Of the new track, Cahir O'Doherty explains: "'Rivals' is about sibling rivalry: the anger and isolation you can feel being part of a family that's breaking apart, and how it can be detrimental to your mental health. Sometimes the people closest can be the most cruel, jealous and manipulative. I've experienced this myself and this song is a direct response to that."

THE PALE WHITE

Ahead of new EP, 'A New Breed' on October 20th, The Pale White have shared new single, 'Taste The Sun'.

The band state, "We want to prove that there are many layers to The Pale White and open up new dimensions as a band. We want to keep evolving and impressing people with each new project, continue moving forward and put out as much music as possible."

INTERLAKER

Interlaker is the brand new project from David Jakes (Ex-Lonely the Brave) and Jack Wrench (Ex-Arcane Roots).

The duo have this week shared the very first taste of what's to come with their debut single, 'Bottomless Pit'!

FLORENCE BLACK

Rising rock trio Florence Black have announced their second album BED OF NAILS, due for release on 1st December. The band have also released their new single 'LOOK UP'.

The band comment, "Since our debut album release in 2021, we have been really busy touring in the UK and EU and, alongside our busiest touring year in 2022, we had written and demoed more than fifty songs. We spent a long time selecting and arranging our songs and feel that they are not just our best to date, but also the ones that show our development as a band. We are incredibly proud of what we have achieved. BED OF NAILS is based around the theme of love. The good, the bad and everything in between that emotion. We had an amazing time in the studio recording it with Romesh. He has helped us to create the exact sound we were aiming for and we believe that we have achieved exactly what we had imagined the album to be."

NORTH ATLAS

Ahead of their headline tour dates this week North Atlas frontman Leon Hunter spoke with us on our 'Discover' New Music Podcast!

The band will play shows in Glasgow, Manchester and London and Hunter had the following to say about the North Atlas live experience:

"There is a kind of vibe to the whole concert; there is sort of bits of spookiness, there's bits of pagan iconography and energy. We're going all out, we've got a proper good stage setup and special things we're gonna do!"

EP REVIEW

'The Longest Shadow Attached to the Ankle'

North Atlas made their emphatic arrival with 2021's 'A Weight for the Heavy Handed' EP, and now they are ready to double down on their enormous potential with new EP, 'The Longest Shadow Attached to the Ankle'.

This EP is a brutal sonic onslaught of intense, soaring heavy rock. Carefully infused electronic elements and deep analytic lyrics help to set the band apart from the pack musically and you really sense that this is an elevation of the North Atlas sound.

In an industry now filled with formulaic acts trying to find their place without setting themselves apart, this is a refreshing glimpse of a band ready to separate themselves from any pre-conceived notions. Gloriously heavy but catchy as hell, North Atlas have set their bar high with their future output!

ALBUM REVIEW

Staind

'Confessions of the Fallen'

Staind are the quintessential early-noughties US radio-rock band. A nostalgic string of hit singles and multi-platinum albums has long established their position in the industry, but they will also know that they've hit their commercial peak.

Many in this position have chosen to milk the nostalgia, others have long separated to seek new opportunities and a small handful continue to release records and try to stay relevant. Over the past decade or so, Staind have mainly been the middle option whilst occasionally dipping into option one, but now they are going all in on option number three!

Whilst their own fanbase will be overjoyed at the news, there will also be many naysayers of will laugh, such is the popularity of shooting down bands of Staind's ilk. Call it the Nickelback effect if you want but there is an equal amount of love and hate out there for radio friendly rock music of their generation.

This combined with singer Aaron Lewis's outspoken politics the band are something of an easy target, but 'Confessions of the Fallen' deserves to be separated from all of the above. After all it's a brave decision to put out a new album after 12 years, and one that they didn't need to make.

Fans will be glad they did though as musically the record feels like they've never been away. Ten tracks spread across thirty-five minutes and you can't really fault what the band have created at all. The likes of album opener 'Lowest In Me' had given a good indication of what to expect and the record fellows suit.

Staind have managed to capture what shot them to great heights in the first place, and this album wouldn't have felt out of place twenty years ago. That said, it still manages to feel fresh enough that to avoid any nostalgic pitfalls.

There probably weren't many clamouring for this album to be made, and the band certainly didn't need to make it, but those that do find themselves checking out 'Confessions of the Fallen' will be pleasantly surprised by the quality.

BIG SPECIAL - 'DESPERATE BREAKFAST'

BIG SPECIAL have shared their latest single, 'DESPERATE BREAKFAST'

Singer Joe Hicklin comments on the song: "'DESPERATE BREAKFAST' is about that first meal of the day you have to force down before you drag yourself to the job you don't want in the place you don't want to be, and the normality of having no choice but to take part in that seemingly infinite routine. It is also in part about the similar cycle that occurs in unemployment. Either way, the morning brings desperation."

Continuing about the video, he says: "Tat Vision is a household name in Brum, we love his work, it's spookiness, the mixture of humour and pain in those faces. We're chuffed he was up for collaborating with us."

Richard Mukuze

headcage have announced the details of their forthcoming EP 'under my skin' and shared it's lead single 'gaslight'.

"I was struggling with symptoms of depression and I distinctly remember trying to explain how I was feeling to my family/friends/doctor and was met with a general dismissive response. Being able to vocalise the frustration I felt at that time, and adding current awareness of these issues using a term like 'gaslight' I can use this song as effective catharsis." shares vocalist, Leyum Pattinson.

Marilena Vlachopoulou

Humour - 'Big Money'

Humour have announced new EP 'A Small Crowd Gathered To Watch Me' and also shared new single 'Big Money'.

Lead singer Andreas Christodoulidis had the following to say about 'Big Money'.

"Big Money was inspired by a story I read about this Peruvian guy called Carlos Fitzcarrald who was a rubber baron in the late 19th Century. He desperately wanted to get to an area of the Amazon basin that was rich in rubber but inaccessible by boat, which is why it hadn't yet been claimed during the rubber boom. He exploited a group of indigenous Amazonian people, forcing them under pain of death to drag his steamboat in pieces over the mountain which separated him from the prized area. He was the basis for the character of Fitzcarraldo in the film of the same name by Werner Herzog. There didn't seem to be much written about this particular story that I could find online, so I was able to be quite liberal when inventing a personality for him. I imagined him being a temperamental character with a lot to prove, prone to violent outbursts and drinking. I wanted to convey a sense of the destruction of the natural world and the traditions of an ancient people that materialised with the introduction of murder and disease to the Amazon by wealth-hungry interlopers."
